

LEASED JONES AND SHOALS WHARVES

Piscataqua Navigation Com- pany Leases for a Term of Years

Harry E. Philbrook, manager of H. E. Philbrook & Co., which recently purchased the Jones and Appledore wharves off Market street, has consummated the biggest wharf transaction of the year by leasing both wharves to the Portsmouth Navigation Company. The lease begins Sept. 1 and will continue for a period of five years. The terms of the lease are withheld.

The Appledore wharf is now used by the Isles of Shoals steamboat company and the Jones wharf is occasionally put into use by ocean-going tugs that reach this port.

This transaction disposes of the oft repeated story that the Consolidation Coal Company had purchased this property. There has been some talk of purchase but the taking over of this property appears to dispose of any immediate sale.

GAME CALLED ON ACCOUNT OF DARKNESS

Consolidation Coal Company Defeat Elks in Pitchers Battle.

The Consolidation Coal defeated the Elks in a four inning game in the Sunset league schedule on Monday evening. The game was called for darkness and this gave the Coal team their win for in the first half of the fifth the Elks by two errors were able to score three runs and Pray sent out a fly to Smart, Hanson and Bunker struck out.

The Consolidation got one man on a base but did not score. Bruce was thrown out by Hanson, Smart by Leary and Dowling got a pass but Saunders was thrown out at first by Cragen.

In the second Cragen struck out and Paul and Zivny both got singles, only to be retired on Jamerson's double play of Rossman's fly which he caught and then touched Paul running to third.

The C. C. opened with Dale striking out, Blaney was struck by a pitched ball and stole second and went to third on a wild pitch. Jamerson struck out and Fernald retired the side being thrown out at first by Leary.

The Elks went out in order. Philbrook on a fly to Bruce, Leary fanned and Pray was caught at first by Fernald.

The Consolidation made their single run in the third. Jamerson the first man up went to first on Cragen's fumble, and stole second. Bruce and Smart struck out and took the lead but in the last half after two of the Consolidation had been struck out one man got his base it was so dark that Umpire Sheridan called the game and set it back to the fourth inning which gave it to the Consolidation, they having scored a run in the third inning.

It was a pitchers battle with both Saunders and Leary twirling great ball, but at the last of it was so dark as to be really dangerous. The Elks got two hits off Saunders and Leary only allowed one, but he gave two passes.

Losing this game takes the Elks back so that they tie with the Y. M. C. A. for second place. There was a kick raised by the Elks when the game was called, as they had two men out, but it did not go. The general impression is that the game should have been stopped at the end of the fourth as it was then too dark to play with safety.

The Elks were the first up and

REPUTATION COUNTS IN THIS!

You can't tell much about rugs by their appearance.

You have to depend on the trade-mark and the honesty of the man who sells them to you.

The rug business is full of "trade names." There are "body brussels" and "near body brussels," and "almost body brussels" and a score of other less obvious variations.

You can't tell by first looks which is the $15.00 rug and which is the $25.00 one. That's where our reputation is worth something to you and to us.

BOSTON & MAINE TO HAVE ITS OWN WATER SUPPLY

Engineers Making Test of Old Eastern R. R. Wells

The move made by the Boston and Maine railroad in this city denotes that the company is very anxious to control its own water supply in Portsmouth. Ever since the company was cut off from the city lines in July engineers have been here looking at several places in view of purchasing the same if such would yield the amount necessary. Recently the engineers decided to make a test of the abandoned wells at the plains and opposite the Morley Button Manufacturing company with hope of obtaining enough for locomotive use. These wells were formerly in operation in the days of the old Eastern Railroad. The city stopped the vein at Shetburne Springs and the railroad was obliged to give up these wells in both places. The railroad commands from one hundred to one hundred and seventy-five thousand gallons daily and the engines believe that these old wells will produce part of the amount needed in daily consumption.

lines in that state. They came over the Portsmouth and took a special train awaiting them at Kittery Junction for a ride over the York Harbor and Beach branch. Later they returned to the Rollinsford branch to Rochester via Somersworth and returned to Portland over the Worcester, Nashua and Portland division. They traveled in the private car of General Superintendent C. E. Lee who with other officials accompanied the board.

GROOM 72, BRIDE 60

BODY FLOATING IN RIVER

Richard O'Brien Picks Up Body of Man Floating off Badger's Island. Thought to Be Missing Engineer Danforth

Early this morning Richard O'Brien, a South End boatman, discovered the body of a man, thought to be that of C. A. Danforth of Salem, Mass., floating in the river between Badger's and Pumpkin Islands.

The body was seen earlier floating up river by the crew of the tug M. Mitchell Davis and other river boats who reported it to the police from Kittery Point.

O'Brien secured the body to the stern of his boat and towed it to the wharf of B. F. Mugridge on this side of the river, where Medical Referee Dr. W. D. Walker viewed it and ordered the remains turned over to Undertaker O. W. Hom.

There was nothing in the clothing that would lead to his identification. A pair of kid gloves and pipes were all that was found on his person. The hands and feet were gone and the skull was bare to the bone. He was dressed in dark clothes with heavy underwear.

to the ship between 11 and 12 o'clock and got into an argument at the entrance of the wharf. Danforth refused to go aboard the ship and his companion left him. Later he attempted to come aboard alone and fell between the ship's side and the wharf. A search for several days by the crew and police failed to reveal anything. Later the order of Elks took up the matter and attempted to find the missing man but finally gave it up. Danforth was a resident of Salem and shipped on the barge at Baltimore. He was about forty years of age and the son of C. A. Danforth of No. 4 Arbella street, a former city clerk of that city.

BOY SCOUTS MAKING GOOD EVERYWHERE

Scout Masters who are registered for the Boy Scouts of America, write many letters to headquarters telling of the development of boys through the scout activities. They report that rough boys have been made gentle, that mischievous boys have been taught consideration for others; weak boys encouraged to take part in athletic exercises, have grown strong, and that boys generally have become more thoughtful at home, and more patriotic.

Because of the good influence of the Boy Scout movement, business men are taking a still greater interest in it. School teachers, professional men and others are contributing to the work and are urging the upbuilding of the Scout troops in their respective towns.

"The work among the Oakland Boy Scouts," O. A. Bremer writes "is very encouraging. The boys come from the very roughest part of the city—the shop district—and some of them seemed almost hopeless. Their teachers at school were continually complaining of their rowdiness, and they used the Oakland Sunday school more as though it were a gymnasium than a place of worship. I have been working with them now almost a year and since I have instituted the Scout movement things have undergone a remarkable change; the boys are really interested and are doing their best to live up to the Scout Law. They have organized a Scout baseball team and it is the best boys' team in the city. The team works together and there is absolutely no wrangling among the players."

Boys Stop Smoking

Edward G. Jenkins, Scout Master of troop No. 11, Honesdale, Pa. Boy Scouts of America, is highly pleased with the work his 20 boy scouts have done in the last four or five months. He is leading the boys through the various scout activities, and reports that the boys are following out the scout program zealously and eagerly. Though all his boys are required to work during the summer they make arrangements to get away in camp having earned the money for the expedition. Jenkins had local doctors teaching the boys first aid and was helped by one who had spent years in the woods in the Northwest. "If," writes Jenkins, "I say that the boys in a short time have developed far beyond my expectations and that I am as proud of them as any mother could be, am I not telling you enough of what my boys are doing constantly and the great interest among the people; of the inveterate cigarette smokers who have quit the habit and are fighting it every day in their hearts. I could write much. One of my boys 14 years old printed the letter head on which I am writing this letter."

SCOUT SAVES A BOY.

H. Lothian, of Prentice Ohio, writes as follows: "I have one boy, Orin Dahl, who saved a boy from drowning in a creek near here. He dived in and brought the boy to land and worked with him until he was restored."

"He was near when he heard the call for help by another who was running away. He, therefore, is entitled to a life savers medal. Will you let me know what action to take to obtain this?"

P. Whitton, Scout Master of Blackwood, N. J., writes, "Our boys are doing well. We have been out camping for a week, and after they come home they all found work with the farmers. There is quite a change with the boys around the town. I find the boys have the best time when they make their amuse-

Chicago Aug. 22—George Hackenschmidt, the "Russian Lion," who is scheduled to wrestle Frank Gotch, the champion, on Labor day, is not in hard training for the bout. Hack appears to be in splendid condition, and his followers predict he will defeat Gotch. Hack has not the slightest doubt that he will win back the world's wrestling championship. "I am heavier and stronger than I have

Hack had been doing light training so easily that there will not be the slightest question as to who is the better man. My superiority will be so marked this time you will find it difficult. Capt. N. R. Usher, commanding the battleship Michigan, which vessel was awarded the pennant for battle efficiency has named the following nine officers of that vessel as having done the most to contribute to that result:

Lieut. Commander C. F. Preston, Lieut. A. C. Pickens, Lieut. (junior grade) J. H. Towers, Lieut. B. L. Canaga, Lieut. W. S. McClintic, Lieut. J. V. Ogan, Lieut. P. H. Sadler, Lieut. Commander W. T. Tarrant and Chief Gunner S. Jacobs.

All of these officers except Lieut. Commanders Preston and Tarrant and Chief Gunner Jacobs have been transferred to other vessels since the date of the competition.

LOOKS BAD FOR SOUTHERN YARDS.

Action is being taken by the Navy Department looking to the abandonment of the naval station at New Orleans and that at Pensacola, Fla.

An initial step in that direction is the detachment of officers on duty at those places and a reduction of the civil force. Naval Constructor William B. Fogarty, U. S. Navy, who performs duty at both stations, has been transferred to Puget Sound. The Navy Department will apply its energies and resources to the development of the naval station at Guantanamo. It is desired by the naval authorities to develop that station in accordance with plans which have been prepared by the naval general board. Up to this time Congress has manifested no disposition to make appropriations for providing shops and the means of doing repair work for the Navy at Guantanamo. There has been a decided preference for making allotments for the stations at home. It is probable there will be a fight over the situation at the next session, when the Navy Department is likely to present

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE IN SESSION

Two More Prominent Republicans Tender Resignations

Concord, N. H., Aug. 22—A special meeting of the executive committee of the republican state committee was held here today. Sec. F. A. Musgrove of Hanover called the meeting to order.

Clarence E. Clough of Lebanon was elected chairman to fill the unexpired term of Edmund S. Cook of Concord, deceased. Mr. Musgrove continues as secretary and William P. Thayer of Concord as treasurer.

The vacancies caused by the resignation of S. M. Jewett and G. H. Adams and by the death of Ex-Gov. John McLane of Milford were not filled today, as the secretary was authorized to communicate with party members in the counties now lacking representation before a selection is made.

Besides Mr. Musgrove the members of the executive committee present at today's meeting were Winston Churchill of Cornish, Albert S. Wetherell of Exeter, Edward E. Rice of New Durham, Frank L. Downs of Manchester and Robert E. Faulkner of Keene. Sec. Musgrove held the proxies of Oliver H. Toothaker of Berlin and A. Crosby Kennett of Conway.

Gen. Frank S. Streeter of Concord, who is traveling in Canada, was not represented.

BUSINESS END OF STRAP GOOD FOR BALKY HORSE

So Observed Judge Pugh When He Fined Man for Overloading

"A balky horse is like a balky boy—they're both bad; and the business end of a strap does 'em a heap of good. A strap is the greatest thing on earth, when properly used."

"The principle of sparing the rod and spoiling the child, applies to a horse. You can spoil a horse and you can spoil a child in the same way. A switch is just as valuable about a stable as it is about a nursery."

The foregoing were a few of the maxims laid down by Judge Pugh of Newington in the Police Court yesterday on how to handle horses. As he is something more than an ordinary judge of horse flesh his words were hailed as coming from an expert.

The occasion for the court's remarks was whether or not Howard Curran was justified in taking a big 1400 pound gray draft horse of the shafts of a heavily loaded lumber wagon at the foot of Connecticut avenue because he was balky and substituting in his place a light buggy horse. As the load weighed a little over 4700 pounds Judge Pugh ruled Curran wasn't justified in doing so, adjudged him guilty of overloading and fined him $5.

PLEASANT THOUGHTS.
Make yourself nests of pleasant thoughts. None of us yet knows, for none of us has been taught in early youth what fairy palaces we may build of beautiful thoughts—proof against adversity. Bright fancies, satisfied memories, noble histories, faithful savings, treasure houses of precious and restful thoughts which care cannot disturb, nor pain make gloomy, nor poverty take away from us—houses built without hands for our souls to live in.—Buskin.

THE PLAY GROUNDS.

No better example of the great amount of good derived from the play grounds, is needed than the exercises held on Monday, in the form of a Children's Carnival. Hundreds of bright-eyed youngsters entered into the sports and exhibits with a zeal that greatly impressed every body present, and convinced the most skeptical that well directed play will be the making of the most unruly boy or girl.

This great movement which is spreading over the entire country, is no place better demonstrated than in this city. Here there is an ideal play ground, with most capable supervisors and with a daily attendance of children that is convincing proof of its popularity.

The grounds are not yet equipped as well as the Play Ground Association would desire, owing to the lack of money. The city can not expend any great sum, and the Association who assists the Board of Public Works in the supervision, are depending on popular subscription to get the necessary funds. There are many things planned and they will be carried out as soon as the necessary funds are provided. It is a worthy object and those who have an interest in the young people should contribute as generously as possible.

BIRD'S EYE VIEWS

New Hampshire is having a banner summer season and well she might.

The so-called republican insurgents and Progressives have left nothing but ruin in their wake thus far. This so-called ring should be named "Destructionists."

Ex-President Roosevelt writes a Pittsburg paper that it would be a public calamity to attempt to run "Teddy" is evidently aware of the public feeling today.

That was a brutal murder committed on a public street in Boston when Lieut. Whittier of the revenue cutter service was set upon by thugs and killed. The police have not made a move as yet so far as the public knows. Boston is rapidly coming up to New York with its list of brutal assaults committed by organized gangs.

AMONG OUR EXCHANGES

Big Guns at Panama

As a first step forward fortifying and arming the approaches to the Panama Canal it is announced from Washington that the big 16-inch gun stored at Sandy Hook is to be shipped to the Canal Zone and mounted there on a site selected for it.

This gun is supposed to be the most formidable weapon ever constructed, 11 feet in diameter, weighing 2400 pounds a distance of sixteen miles. The projectile designed for it carries within its mass about 150 pounds of high-explosive powder. It is believed that with this and similar guns mounted upon strategic point near the canal, it would be impossible for any hostile warship to approach near enough to the canal to throw a shell or any other kind of projectile into the waterway.

It is added in the Washington report: "A large projectile fired over the fortifications and dropped into one of the locks or dams might close up the canal for a year." Therefore the big guns are needed.

But what is to prevent an aeroplane flying through the night from dropping a shell on the big gun itself?

There is one sure way and only one to make the canal beyond all doubting: that is to put it under the guardianship of international neutrality.—New York World.

LITERARY NOTES

The September Century

The September Century is an all-around-the-world number, with articles of fresh interest covering almost every land of the globe—Africa, South America, Japan, New Zealand, Greenland, India, Algeria, England, etc. A unique presentation of the missions question comes in a discussion of "Christian Missions in Japan," by Adachi Kinnosuke; and Anna Distrup, wife of the Danish governor of Greenland writes of "Eskimo Women in Greenland," out of the experiences of twenty-five years' residence in that country. The fifth paper of Guglielmo Ferrero's notable series on "The Women of the Caesars" deals vividly with one of the most stormy periods of Roman history, and the part played therein by the sisters of Caligula and the marriage of Messalina.

There is more than the usual number of short stories in this number, by Harriet Prescott Spofford, Eden Phillpotts, Elsie Singmaster, L. Frank Tooker, Chester Bailey Fernald, Mark F. Wilcox and Edward H. Thompson.

Motoring in the Sierra

"It all goes to show how a miracle of yesterday becomes the commonplace of today," writes Earle Snell, in Sunset Magazine for September. "Until within the last two or three years the Sierra grades were considered the supreme test for motor car drivers. For many owners even to attempt the trip was considered as much as a car's life was worth. Then improved roads and increased realization of motor car possibilities seemed to boost the Sierra routes almost in a day into the position of first popularity for automobile tours. Scores of machines began to troop over the grades where scarcely one had gone before. Inhabitants of little mountain settlements who had previously inspected a chance car with all the breathless interest that a Halley's comet could inspire began to keep their chairs at the dinner table, even though the honking of horn and wild cackling of poultry proclaimed the passing of an automobile. Then the merchants of these same settlements began to have calls for various accessories, such as gasoline and lubricating oil. At first they peered over their steel-rimmed spectacles and shook their heads negatively while the loungers rapped their heels against the barrels on which they sat and grinned behind their hands. But it did not continue

Portsmouth People Give Credit Where Credit is Due

People of Portsmouth who suffer with sick kidneys and bad backs want a kidney remedy that can be depended upon. The best is Doan's Kidney Pills, a medicine for the kidneys only, made from pure roots and herbs, and the only one that is backed by willing testimony of Portsmouth people. Here's a case:

James Pickles, 11 Burkett St., Portsmouth, N. H., says: "I was afflicted with kidney disease for several years and was unable to find relief from dull pains in my back until a few months ago when I procured Doan's Kidney Pills at Philbrick's Pharmacy. Often I had such severe pains across my loins that I could scarcely move. The kidney secretions contained sediment and were so frequent in passage that I was obliged to arise several times at night. Doan's Kidney Pills helped me from the first and continued use entirely cured me."

FIFTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Gleanings From Files of Portsmouth Chronicle

Passports.—A notice is published by the State Department that hereafter persons going to foreign ports will be required to procure passports before leaving the country. Heretofore persons bearing evidences of citizenship have been allowed to take passports from our ministers and consuls in other countries. Passports are now to be procured at the State Department in Washington. After a reasonable time for notice shall have elapsed no person will be allowed to land in the United States without a passport from a U. S. minister or consul; or if a foreigner from his own government countersigned by such minister or consul.

The travel to the White Mountains is stimulated as the season draws to a close. The weather in that region the past two weeks has been very fine and tourists in the whole mountain districts agree in declaring that the views obtained have never been surpassed.

A joke. The gasoline tank began to pay better than the grain bin. Today the well stocked accessories department of the many general merchandise stores that perch beside the various Sierra roads eloquently evidence the important growth of automobile touring in those parts. The early feuds between settlers and automobilists have been completely dispelled through a greater regard cultivated by the latter for the former's safety, and the realization but recently reached by the rural inhabitant that the coming of the automobile means much for the development of his locality. No motorist inclined to show due courtesy and civility need now fear any inconvenience from the people who live throughout the "Sierra."

MONDAY AT THE PLAY GROUNDS

The results of the doll show published in last evening's Herald was the topic of conversation by the young people and the additional sports for the afternoon resulted as follows:

There were fully three thousand people present during the afternoon and they thoroughly enjoyed the good time the children were having. The program started with an elaborate Indian dance, under the direction of Big Chief Howard, and Indian songs followed.

A basketball game between two teams of the girls was won by the blues. Folk dancing was then in order and a very excellent exhibition of folk dances of Russia, Norwegian, etc., was given and considering the short time the children have been in training they did fine.

A May pole dance and a Russian dance by Hollis Gray were features. A peep show arranged with cardboard, with scenery all the work of two lads, Coombs and Smith, made a hit.

Miss Horni presided at the piano for all the dances. At three o'clock the children were gathered around the flag staff and a new flag was unfurled by pretty little Priscilla Howard, daughter of Supervisor, Howard, and when it swung to the breeze the children stood at attention and gave the salute and all then united in the singing of "My Country 'Tis of Thee." This was one of the most inspiring sights of the afternoon. The handsome flag unfurled was the gift of A. P. Wendall & Co.

The sports were then held on the baseball diamond, and as a result of which the girls of the Whipple school increased their lead and won first place with 238 points. Parochial was next with 189, Haven third, 129 points, and Farragut, 100.

The boys' sports were held at the same time and they resulted as follows: 100-yard dash—1, Charles Thomas; 2, Herbert Broomfield; 3, William Horan. Running broad jump—1, Arthur Davis, 13-4; 2, Charles Thomas, 12-6; 3, Arthur Gorman, 12.

Base running—1, Charles Thomas, 17-3-5; 2, Paul Conover, 19-2-5; 3, Herbert Broomfield, 20-8.

Fifty-yard dash Indian boys—1, Paul Reardon; 2, Ed. Rivers; 3, Frances Brown.

Following the sports, Mayor Badger, who was an interested spectator, in a brief but excellent speech presented the silver loving cup to the Whipple school, for the girls' sport and they will have the care of the cup for one year.

A handsome bouquet of flowers was presented to Hon. Woodbury Langdon by Irene Drake in behalf of the children of the play ground. Mr. Langdon has been greatly interested in the play grounds and has been almost a daily visitor.

The story about French agents being in the South purchasing large quantities of tobacco and paying gold therefor is too absurd to gain credence. French agents are not so blind to their interests as to pay for a commodity double the price it will be worth when producers are able to deliver it.

The illness of Ex-President Buchanan is said to have been caused by sheer exhaustion. He daily receives letters of bitter denunciation.

A fire in the swamp in the vicinity of Stratham on Tuesday morning gave rise to a report in this city that the residence of Col. J. W. Pelree in Greenland was in flames. Many of our citizens rode out and not a few importuned the chief engineer to send forward the city engines; but he very wisely waited for more reliable information in regard to the locality of the fire before doing so.

President Taft Signs the New Mexico-Arizona Resolution with Three Pens

Washington, Aug. 21.—President Taft signed the joint resolution for the admission of New Mexico and Arizona into the union at 3.08 p. m. Senator Penrose, Representatives Weeks of Massachusetts and Barclay of Pennsylvania, the delegates of the two territories and a number of citizens from New Mexico and Arizona witnessed the signing.

There was but one resolution, so that the President used three different pens in order that some of the relievers might be satisfied. When the resolution was laid on his desk he looked up at the crowd around him and said:

"Has anybody read this?" Nobody answered and to make certain of it the President read the resolution himself.

"Well gentlemen, it's done," he said as he put the last stroke on the parchment. The resolution signed by the President provides that Arizona shall eliminate the judicial recall clause in its constitution.

At three o'clock the children were gathered around the flag staff and a new flag was unfurled by pretty little Priscilla Howard, daughter of Supervisor, Howard, and when it swung to the breeze the children stood at attention and gave the salute and all then united in the singing of "My Country 'Tis of Thee." This was one of the most inspiring sights of the afternoon.

The handsome flag unfurled was the gift of A. P. Wendall & Co. The sports were then held on the baseball diamond, and as a result of which the girls of the Whipple school increased their lead and won first place with 238 points. Parochial was next with 189, Haven third, 129 points, and Farragut, 100.

The boys' sports were held at the same time and they resulted as follows: 100-yard dash—1, Charles Thomas; 2, Herbert Broomfield; 3, William Horan.

Running broad jump—1, Arthur Davis, 13-4; 2, Charles Thomas, 12-6; 3, Arthur Gorman, 12. Base running—1, Charles Thomas, 17-3-5; 2, Paul Conover, 19-2-5; 3, Herbert Broomfield, 20-8.

Fifty-yard dash Indian boys—1, Paul Reardon; 2, Ed. Rivers; 3, Frances Brown.

A handsome bouquet of flowers was presented to Hon. Woodbury Langdon by Irene Drake in behalf of the children of the play ground. Mr. Langdon has been greatly interested in the play grounds and has been almost a daily visitor.

The ladies who so ably assisted Miss Cloud and Mr. Howard were on ice cream. Mrs. C. J. Smith, who was assisted by Mrs. Hollis Gray, Mrs. John Leary and Miss Marie Alkon. The assistants, Jo, Mrs. Towle was Mrs. L. M. Nord, Miss Monche Fisher, and Mrs. Fannie Burill, Mrs. C. D. Howard was general assistant to Miss Cloud. In charge of the lunch room were Mrs. T. H. Stiles, assisted by the Misses Jeanette and Lillian Cooney and Angelina Chaisson. Miss Eva Horne presided at the piano for the dance. Mrs. Charles A. Towle provided sandwiches for the little fellows who did not go home. They were donated by Messrs. Chick, Downing, and Hodgdon and Korshaw.

Great credit must be given to Miss Cloud, the supervisor of the small boys and girls and Mr. Howard, the supervisor of the older boys and grounds.

Notes of the Day

The committee of ice cream were: Mrs. C. J. Smith chairman, Mrs. Hollis Gray, Mrs. John Leary, Miss Alkon, Mr. Lilley and Fred Gibson. The committee dealt out over thirty gallons cream during the day.

The Labor Day meet for men is taking on shape. The program starts in the morning. Director C. D. Howard is planning a tennis tournament for young men. All those interested will report to Mr. Howard.

Next season Mr. Howard expects to have two new tennis courts.

The new flag pole has arrived and will be placed in position at once. Three thousand women and children were handled at the playgrounds yesterday without one accident and without a police officer on duty, which speaks words of praise for Director Howard and Miss Cloud the supervisor of the girls department.

Ogunquit

York Beach Aug. 21.—The business men of York Beach today defeated the business men of Ogunquit for the benefit of the respective fire departments, at Railroad field, by the score of 13 to 17 in one of the longest games seen here this season. A parade started the performance in front of the fire station. The apparatus followed the men of both teams about the principal streets of the beach.

Young Hildreth and Duff all took possession of the mound in order to keep the visitors down. Chief Watson of the beach showed how to run bases.

Fred Frisbee crowned himself with glory in the field by his catches and made four hits out of five times up. The game was called at the end of the seventh by agreement.

The line-up of the teams was as follows:

York Beach—McGowan c, Young p, Sewell 1b, Duff 2b, Watson 3b, Ellis ss, Richards lf, Frisbee cf, Bowdin rf, Hildreth p, 2b.

Ogunquit—J. Jacobs c, Williams p, Keene 1b, Hooper 2b, H. Littlefield ss, A. Littlefield 3b, R. Brewster lf, J. Brewster cf, F. Jacobs rf.

"Yes-Yes!"

It Sounded Better After Nearly Losing It

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

When Elizabeth Gray returned to Elmwood after a year spent with an uncle in a distant city, she found few changes in the quiet village. The morning after her arrival she lay contentedly in the slant roofed little room that had been hers since childhood and listened to the familiar music of hammer and saw from the distant shipyards.

Just then wood smoke reminded her that her mother was getting breakfast in the kitchen and with a pricking of remorse at her slothfulness, Elizabeth arose and dressed.

"I thought the waffles would arouse you, Bess," smiled her mother, as the girl entered the kitchen, flushed and sparkling. "Here is the first batch—take them in and begin your breakfast."

"Mother mine," scolded Elizabeth, leading the rosy cheeked, plump little woman into the dining room. "Sit right down and eat breakfast with dad. I shall cook waffles for both of you. Not a word!"

She smiled back at the two loving faces as she passed to and fro from kitchen to dining room unaltered to their wants.

"We can't expect to keep her with us always," sighed her mother. "This last year without her has shown me how dreary it will be for us when—somebody takes her away."

"By somebody? I suppose you mean Norman," bellowed Mr. Gray's deep voice. "I don't know as there's another man in Elmwood, to say nothing of the outside world, that I'd rather give my little Bess to than Norman Ryder. Perhaps she has met some body else in the city—you can't tell—and Norman's only country bred. Bess probably met some fine dandified chap in New York."

"I'd rather it would be Norman," insisted Mrs. Gray, with a little frightened flutter in her voice that went straight to Elizabeth's heart. "I couldn't bear to have Bess marry any body from the city. We might not see her from one year's end to the other."

Elizabeth hastened into the dining room with a plate of waffles scorching to a crisp and her fair face flushed and agitated.

"I've heard every word you said," she confessed between tears and laughter. "Dear, I'm not going to marry anybody. I haven't seen any one in New York that could tempt me away from you."

Mr. Gray squeezed the little hand she had laid in his broad palm and looked quizzically into her blue eyes.

"How about anybody in Elmwood, Bess?" he asked.

"I don't want to marry anybody," flashed Elizabeth tearfully. "I want to stay right here all my life."

That evening Norman Ryder drove over to see Elizabeth Gray, and such is the contrariness of womankind that he who had always found favor in her eyes, now appeared to be awkward and provincial in manner and speech as compared to the shrewy youths she had met when visiting her uncle. Although he was bigger and broader and handsomer than any of the city bred youths, almost the first words he uttered seemed to place him in a different class.

"So you knew I had returned, Norman?" she asked, withdrawing her hands from his close grasp.

"Yes, yes," he had cried delightedly, and it was that characteristic double affirmative uttered with a slight twang that drew a thin veil of discord between them. There was something about the expression that smacked strongly of the rustic; that, with the twang and the equally favored double negative, "No, no," seemed to place Norman Ryder among the farmers and draymen who formed the community about Elmwood.

Elizabeth hated herself for shuddering every time Norman spoke with a twang, but she couldn't help it. She was angry with him for speaking so—her father did not, nor did any of their neighbors. It was carelessness on Norman's part, and it grated on her sensibilities.

"I thought you knew I'd returned," he said rather ruefully, as he drew his chair near the glowing stove. "But I expect you were pretty busy studying your music. I'm going to ask you to play some of your classical pieces for me by and by."

"Of course I will," said Elizabeth, "I didn't write to anybody here except father and mother, and they said," she purred with sudden confusion.

"I guess they said I came over here most every night while you were gone," he grinned happily. "They let me read your letters—and that was next best to getting 'em myself."

"I didn't promise you I'd write," protested Elizabeth, rather stiffly.

"No, no," he interjected quickly, exonerating her from blame. "But—but I kind of thought you might answer one of 'em, and so I kept on writing."

"I was glad to hear from you, and I suppose it was mean of me never to answer any of them, but did mother give you the message I sent?"

"Yes, yes," he said, looking at her. "He looked at him and so Elizabeth that Elizabeth had to harden her heart against the music of his dark eyes."

Every time that basal twang smote on her ear she winced, and after awhile she grew to counting the times he said "Yes, yes" and "No, no." If he would only break himself of using those expressions. But of course he could not know how they sounded. Everybody in Elmwood used them except a few persons like the minister and the doctor and lawyer and her own father. Outsiders laughed and called it part of the dialect of Buffum county.

When Elizabeth asked him if she should play for him Norman said "Yes, yes," and when she asked if he had had enough music he cried hastily "No, no" until her nerves were all a-jangle.

At last he arose to go, and there was a very tender look in his down beat eyes as he fingered his hat. "There was something I wanted to say to you, Bess. I wonder if I better say it now? I guess you know what it is." He looked steadily at her. Elizabeth did not hesitate. She was angry with him for his rustic ways and provoked at herself because she was too narrow minded to overlook them.

"I don't believe you better say it," she said deliberately, her eyes on the small shoe that tapped the carpet.

His face whitened underneath the bronze, and there was a stricken look in his eyes. "I hardly dared to hope much since I heard you were coming home, but before you went away"—he choked a little and asked her a question, "Will you tell me why, Bess?"

She looked up at him with a strange hardness in her heart. "Do you really want me to tell you?" she asked.

"Yes, yes," he said eagerly.

"That's it, Norman Ryder," she flashed. "It's your Buffum county twang and your everlasting 'yes-yes' and 'no-no,' and you know better too!"

He stared at her, bewildered for a moment, and as the import of her words struck home he reddened deeply and all the tenderness fled from his eyes. "So that's the reason?" he said gratingly. "Well, Bess, there's no chance for me, then, because if you don't love me enough to overlook a mere habit of speech you don't love me as much as I want you to. I suppose I don't shine very brightly compared with the city fellows you've met, but I've loved you better than anybody else in the world ever could." He crammed on his hat and without another word left the house.

Elizabeth stood alone in the parlor, her eyes fixed in a frightened stare on the closed door, her heart pounding in unison with Norman's departing steps on the crisp snow.

It was bright moonlight, and scores of young people were coasting down the steep hill that ran past the Grays' home. Elizabeth heard their shouts of laughter and the frequent warning cry of "Road!"

The gate crashed into place behind Norman's impatient swing. There was the roar of a coming bobbed, a muffled thud and then shouts of distress.

Elizabeth reached the front gate at the same time her father and mother hurried to the same place, drawn by the sounds of an accident.

Somebody had been run down by the bobbed—somebody who lay, a dark motionless figure against the whiteness of the snow. Around his head the snow was stained a crimson that widened and widened horribly.

It was Norman Ryder, and when Elizabeth reached his side a little group of men were lifting him from the snow.

"Bring him into my house," commanded Mr. Gray, leading the way, and so they carried him across the doorstep which he had left in anger a few moments before and bore him upstairs to the front chamber.

A doctor was summoned, and while Mrs. Gray prepared bandages and other necessities her husband built a roaring fire in the fireplace, and Elizabeth sat cold and numb beside that still form on the bed. Her hands rigidly held in place the bag of ice her mother laid on his forehead above the bandage that covered the deep cut. Her eyes were fixed on the white set features and closed lids and the finely chiseled lips which might part no more to utter the homely dialect of the country which she had despised and ridiculed.

She could not weep. She could only sit there, a miserable, heartbroken little figure, hating herself for her censorious words.

The doctor came and warded her aside. For an hour he worked over the young man, while Elizabeth sat in her own room breathless and despairing. Then at last she heard him going away, and instantly she was at the door of Norman's room. Her mother smilingly beckoned her within and left them alone together.

Norman, looking very pale, his head swathed in bandages, did not see her come in. For a moment she stood there looking down at him with her heart in her eyes.

Suddenly he looked up at her, smiling whimsically in the old way, as he had been used to do before she told him the unpleasant truths. He had looked that way when he was a boy growing up and she was a little girl trotting to school beside him.

"Doctor says I'll be all right in a day or so," he smiled. "But I'll have to keep still. You don't mind my being here in your house, do you, Bess?"

"No, no," she cried, dropping unconsciously into the vernacular of Buffum county. She slipped to her knees beside the bed and leaned her sunny head against his shoulder.

Norman quivered and then laid one hand on her head. "Oh, Bess, you don't mean it? Do you love me?" he whispered.

"Yes, yes," sobbed Elizabeth. And to them both it was the sweetest word in the world.

A CHANGE OF PLANS

Age Must Give Place to Youth

By OSCAR COX

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"My dear," wrote Mrs. Maryweather, a widow, to her daughter Mollie. "I have an announcement to make to you which will cause a change in our affairs. I have had an offer of marriage which I have accepted, and I trust that it will be a matter of comfort rather than one of distress to you. You know how inconvenient it is to have to get on without a man to manage for us—to see to the baggage when we travel and be a protection against burglars. All such deficiencies will now be supplied as well for you as for me."

"Mr. Prendergast is not an old man. On the contrary, he has the activity of a man of thirty. Therefore you will find him useful for an escort, and as he is fond of going out you will not have to urge him to go or be bothered by his wishing to come away before the small hours of the morning."

Miss Maryweather paused in reading the letter to make a remark to herself. "That's very thoughtful of mamma to marry a man between our ages who can be useful to both of us."

"Mr. Prendergast," the letter continued, "comes from here at once especially to meet you, your consent and approval being absolutely essential. I hope you will be pleased with him and in time come to love him as a father."

"I should think," mused Miss Mollie, pausing again, "that if he's only thirty years old mamma might fear that I would in time come to love him as a lover."

"I have been influenced," continued the writer, "in accepting his offer by our proposed trip to Italy in the autumn. You know how difficult traveling is in that country, especially for us who do not speak Italian. Mr. Prendergast speaks that language very well, and think how convenient it will be to have him with us."

"I am not sure," mused the girl again, "but that mamma is giving me all this as an excuse for marrying a man younger than herself. She's very foxy."

The rest of the letter was taken up with dressmaking and millinery matters and only interesting to women. The day after its receipt the card of Archibald Prendergast was taken up stairs to Miss Maryweather, and after an inspection of herself in a mirror, usual to ladies about to receive calls, she went downstairs and entered the drawing room with curious expectation. Agreeably surprised to see a handsome man who could not possibly be over twenty-five years old, her face broke into a smile well calculated to reassure him that he was welcomed into the family. Mr. Prendergast reflected a smile, and the two sat down to get acquainted.

"I received mother's letter telling me all about how matters stand," said Miss Mollie. "Of course you know that so far as I am concerned there is no sentiment—that is all mother's. With me it's what I'm going to gain. She tells me that you will not object to taking me out and won't wish to hurry home just when the dancing is at the liveliest."

"But will father permit that?"

"I was not speaking of your father; I referred to you. I don't see what your father has to do with the matter. Mother has every confidence in me, and I'm sure there will be no impropriety in a young woman going out with her step—"

"You mean a young married woman. Nor is there any impropriety in a stepson escorting his mamma anywhere. By the bye, where is the wedding to take place?"

"That is for you and mother to settle between yourselves," replied the girl, with a look of surprise.

"I don't see what your mother has to do with it."

"Perhaps father, being older than his fiancée—I mean perhaps father's fiancée, being so much younger than he—may expect her to be influenced by her mother."

"If you are referring to my grandmother, all I have to say is that she died thirty years ago."

"You are very young to be a widow," Jergast speaks that language very well, and think how convenient it will be to have him with us."

"I am not sure," mused the girl again, "but that mamma is giving me all this as an excuse for marrying a man younger than herself. She's very foxy."

"If you are referring to my grandmother, all I have to say is that she died thirty years ago."

"Have you been talking about my grandfather?"

"Your grandfather? No. What has he to do with the matter?"

The two looked at each other wonderingly; then Mr. Prendergast said: "You are very young to be a widow."

"I a widow?"

"Yes, father said you were a widow."

"If you don't let that father of yours alone, I don't see how we shall ever get on at all. I shall be pleased to welcome you into the family, but as to your relations, I don't see why—"

"But you don't mean to marry a man and have nothing to do with him. How can that be?"

"I marry a man! What are you talking about?"

"About your proposed union with my father."

"Goodness gracious! I'm talking about your union with my mother."

"Well, I'll be hanged!"

"There must be some misunderstanding."

"I should say so."

"I received a letter yesterday from mother announcing her engagement to a Mr. Prendergast, and she said he was coming at once to make my acquaintance."

"And I received a letter from father announcing his engagement to a widow named Maryweather, and he asked me to call upon her. Here is the letter; see for yourself. Mrs. Maryweather will be at home on the 10th."

"The 10th. You're got it wrong. That is not a 1; it's a 2."

"By Jove! I believe you're right."

"And here is my letter from mother. She says her fiancée is thirty years old. See: 'Mr. Prendergast is not an old man. On the contrary, he has the activity of a man of thirty.'"

"That doesn't mean that he's thirty. It means he's sixty as a man of thirty."

"Upon my word! How stupid of me!"

"So it's your mother my father is to marry."

"And your father that my mother is to marry."

"Quite a difference."

"I should say so. It's fortunate that we discovered the mistake in time."

"In time for what?"

"Why, for me, mother wrote me to welcome her fiancée into the family, and I might have been demonstrative with my stepfather that was to be."

"I wish you had been."

"That's very naughty of you."

"There wouldn't have been any harm so long as you thought I was to be your stepfather and you my step-mother."

"How ridiculous! In one thing I'm disappointed."

"What's that?"

"Why, mamma writes that her fiancée's going with us to Italy in the autumn. Will he?"

"Well, won't he?"

"But I think you would be much more—"

"You think I would be more available for what purpose?"

"Neither mamma nor I speak Italian."

"Father does; so do I."

"Then there's the baggage."

"Father won't attend to that; he hates details."

"I knew mamma was saying all that for a purpose. Who is to look after the baggage, I should like to know?"

"How would I do?"

"You're not going to marry mother."

"And you're not going to marry father."

"Don't you see—mother wrote that your father, speaking Italian and being very active, would take all that of our hands."

"Father is fifty-six, and he has a bad knee. He walks with a cane."

"Mother put the best foot forward in the matter, didn't she?"

"You mean the best knee forward. Or, rather, she forgot to mention the knee and the cane."

"I suppose so."

"They both smiled."

"I don't see any way to keep father from making trouble to your family in this affair except by offering to join the party and serve as courier."

"That wouldn't do it. A party made up of two old persons and two young ones would be a failure. If an elderly man and woman usurp the place of young persons by getting married they should take care of themselves. It would be absurd for us to go on such a wedding trip."

"Of course it would."

"I think I'll leave mother to be taken care of by her husband with his bad knee and his cane."

"And if father has been pretending that he is able to look after baggage in a country where every railroad official is a bloodsucker and the porters are robbers he can get out of the scrape as best he can."

The young man rose to go. "Goodbye, mamma," he said smiling.

"Goodbye, papa."

"My dear," wrote Mrs. Maryweather a few months after the date of her first. "I think your treatment of your mother very shabby. Your stepfather and I did not count on you and his son's action at all. We have given up our Italian trip, but I trust you and Archie will enjoy yours."

"I dare say you are enjoying yourselves in the galleries of Florence. Quite a change from the trip that was expected. You two young persons are enjoying the wedding journey that we two older ones expected to take."

To this letter Mrs. Mollie replied: "Mother, dear, I have your letter. I think you and my stepfather are better off at home. You see, these Italian houses, not being heated, are as cold as James' with your rheumatism and Mr. Prendergast's knee you would be miserable here. Archie joins me in much love for you both."

Wanted—West Pointers.

What has become of the old time fighting spirit of the American youth? In the new class entering the Military Academy at West Point there are a hundred rhenocenes. For these cadetships, it is said, no applicants have presented themselves. The reverse used to be the rule. In every congressional district were ambitious boys wanting to adopt the military profession. West Point is an up to date institution, where the students receive a thorough education. A man who goes through the academy receives not only military instruction, but a genuine college education. Recently several splendid new buildings have been completed, and the new West Point offers greater inducements than ever.

The young man who goes to an ordinary college or university must pay his own way or have it paid for him from the parental purse. When he comes out with his diploma, he has his own way to make. He must paddle his own canoe in the life-long race. The West Pointer's career is cut out for him, in so far as a steady job at a living income is concerned. Except in time of war, of course, the opportunities for making great names are not numerous, but every West Point man who is diligent in his duties is assured of promotion from time to time up to the retirement age, after which he receives part pay for life. From the moment he enters the academy and dons the government uniform he receives free board and a cash compensation which in itself is sufficient to put many a young man through college.

Why, then, is there not a rush for West Point appointments? Is it because our young men have come to look upon military life as distasteful or not sufficiently remunerative? Perhaps the prospect of many years' assignment to lonely frontier posts is undesirable to some, though, as a rule every American army officer in the course of his career will have plenty of opportunity for social life, travel and recreation.

Farm Promotion by States.

Several states, notably New Hampshire and New York, maintain bureaus whose work is to gather and publish information about abandoned farms and good farm land that are for sale with a view to getting city people to move to the country and take up agriculture. Ohio recently has joined this movement. The state board of agriculture also will open a farm labor bureau to assist Ohio farmers who find it difficult to get farm hands. The secretary of the board is quoted as saying that in recent years there has been a steady exodus of farm hands to Kansas and other states west of the Mississippi in spite of the fact that Ohio farmers offer wages as good as those offered by the states farther west. The exodus is due to the fact that the western farmers advertise for help. Probably a similar condition of vacant jobs exists in every state.

In New York state the bureau has found work on farms in the past five years for nearly 20,000 persons, many of them from New York city. Through the agency of the state board of agriculture $5,500,000 worth of farm land has been sold, much of it to city dwellers who have been induced to get on the land. New Hampshire's bureau has been the means of disposing of many abandoned farms on which modern methods of agriculture the new owners can earn a good living.

For some time past Missouri, backed enthusiastically by Governor Hadley has been exploiting the advantages of cheap lands in some sections of the state, with the result that many new farms have been opened. This is a line of work in which any state may engage with advantage. There is a great deal of unoccupied land which will yield a living income. There are many thousands of persons who want to get such land, but they do not know just where to find it. The problem of placing the right man on the right land seems to be up to the state.

NORTH CAROLINA'S TROPHY

When NEW YORK

The trophy won by the armored cruiser North Carolina for the greatest engineering efficiency in the navy will be presented to that vessel in Hampton roads the latter part of this week.

The ceremony was scheduled for yesterday off Provincetown, Mass., but was postponed in order to permit the attendance of Acting Secretary Winthrop, who will present the trophy, Admiral Twining, chief of the Cone, bureau of ordnance, and Admiral Cone, engineering-in-chief of the navy.

ROCHESTER FAIR

The management of the Rochester Fair are actively at work getting everything in readiness for the thirty-sixth annual exhibition to be held September 26, 27, 28 and 29.

The entries in the different departments are the largest ever made in the history of the fair and the list of free attractions will include Glenn H. Curtis who will make three flights daily in his aeroplane.

September 27th, the second day of the fair will be "Legislators Day" and on that day the entire legislative body will be entertained by the Rochester Fair Association.

The races will be a big feature this year and some of the fastest horses on the New England Circuit will be seen here.

Secretary Frank B. Maguire is the grounds for the comfort and convenience of the patrons and with good weather the Rochester Fair of 1911 will be the biggest and best fair ever held in New Hampshire.

Emerson Piano
Quality.

Quality in a Piano is absolutely essential, for a poor quality piano is not a piano at all. It may be a "furniture piano" if you will, but it is not a musical one —and what is the good of a piano if it is no musical?

The Emerson Piano seems to grow better every day. The makers of this instrument have lately surpassed themselves. The pianos that are now coming to us are simply magnificent. The touch, the tone, and the finish are better than ever before.

The more difficult you are to please, the better we shall like it, for you cannot but be pleased with these instruments, yet with all their goodness they are sold for a fair price on easy terms.

the best way to lay it out and also get our figures for the work.
Handsome sanitary bathrooms are plumbing features to which we give special attention. We have put them in some of the finest homes in the city. We wouldn't have been employed if it hadn't been known that we do first-class work. Think that over.
